the park attached to massive speakers so that everyone could hear the music that came from this tower. Rose Hill is believed to be the first cemetery in this area to provide music rather than simply chimes.

Singers from New Britain performed on Sunday afternoons and people were welcome to attend these concerts and bring along a picnic dinner. They also did this on Christmas Eve. WDRC radio broadcast these concerts live.

The music tower was taken away for restoration and repair and is scheduled to be returned to the same site this August. It will also serve as a columbarium housing niches for cremated remains.

Rose Hill offers full burial and cremation burial. There is also a crypt section featuring double-depth lots with two burial spaces in the same gravesite. The cemetery covers 140 acres.

Librio said they have been working over the years to restore some of the classic monuments that are located around the park. Funds are currently being solicited to restore the Last Supper Monument.
